

TEACH LEAD

Teach to Lead envisions a world in which teachers are valued as the foremost experts in instruction and, as such, are leaders in developing, informing, and implementing education policy and practice to steer systemic improvements to benefit student learning.

3 OBJECTIVES

1

Increase pathways and opportunities for teachers to exercise leadership

2

Elevate teacher voice to inform and develop policy and practice

3

Expand existing efforts and create models to steer systemic improvements to benefit student learning

“We don’t just want educators to be part of the necessary change—we need them to lead it.”

—John King, Secretary of Education

POWERED BY

TEACH  LEAD

Powered by Teach to Lead events enable organizations to build on the Teach to Lead model, conducting teacher leadership summits that meet the unique needs of promising teacher-led projects.

JOIN THE MOVEMENT

Teacher Leadership Summits engage teams of educators in two-day workshops, turning their transformative ideas into actionable plans. Educators come together with a personal passion to transform schools and the teaching profession to better meet the needs of students.

For more information about future Summits go to www.teachtolead.org.

Leadership Labs are more intimate daylong meetings intended to increase or expand the progress of a single Teach to Lead team. These collaborative events enable participants to share best practices, identify challenges, and, ultimately, create actionable commitments.
